What are Public-Private Partnerships?

A recently passed law establishes mechanisms to allow public-private partnerships for various building and highway infrastructure projects in New Jersey. Under the bill's provisions, a public body would be authorized to use private capital to fund viable projects encouraging competition and transparency while providing a cost-effective means of financing construction projects.

The program will address:

- What are P3s and what are they not
- The purpose of the new Statute and how it could be used effectively in the State
- The history of P3s in New Jersey and other states
- Understanding the components of the new P3 law
- How P3s differ from traditional construction procurement in New Jersey
- Where construction managers, general contractors, subcontractors and suppliers fit within the P3 landscape
