Important Upgrades In Progress To Kings Highway In Camden County

Each day, thousands of drivers move along a 2.4-mile stretch of Kings Highway (CR 551 S) in Camden County. The roadway sits within the boroughs of Mt. Ephraim, Haddon Heights, and Audubon and has long been a vital transportation route.

This area was the site of an important Revolutionary War battle that took place across what is now six towns in Camden County. Later, Haddon Lake Park was developed during the New Deal era by the Civilian Conservation Corps and Works Progress Administration. Today, Kings Highway is an essential traffic corridor that connects communities and supports regional development in South Jersey.

Since its inception, Kings Highway has been a vital link for car commuters as well as NJ Transit, with more than 22 bus stops. It is also traversed by pedestrians and bicyclists. The Highway has undergone some minor improvements during the past century, with the last improvements made in 1964. It has also undergone numerous underground utility installations and emergency repairs, leading to patchwork surface. The roadway lacks ADA compliant curb ramps and sidewalk, all of which pose challenges for travelers whether on foot, on two wheels, or in a bus or vehicle.

Fortunately, a significant improvement project spearheaded by Camden County is now in progress. This landmark upgrade, the first of its kind in decades, will be a transformative achievement that meets both regulatory and community needs and ushers Kings Highway into a new era. The project is a collaborative effort between the Camden County Board of Commissioners and the governing bodies of the municipalities traversed by the roadway. Other stakeholders include two elementary schools, two shade tree commissions, three utility companies, and the police departments of all three boroughs – united with the goal of enhancing safety and commuter satisfaction traversing the roadway.

Components of the Kings Highway project include pavement restoration and rehabilitation to restore and enhance the roadway surface and make it smoother for all travelers. Safety improvements will include high-visibility crosswalks at all intersections, flashing beacons at critical intersections with high foot traffic, and traffic-calming features such as curb extensions.

The improvements will also include infrastructure upgrades, with rehabilitation of sanitary and storm sewers.

The project, which began in August and is funded by Camden County Capital Improvement Funds and ARPA funds, will deliver long-term benefits to the involved communities by enhancing safety and accessibility while supporting ongoing regional growth in Camden County and beyond.

The State Of AI At Year's End

By PKA Technologies, Inc.

2024 has been an incredible year for artificial intelligence, marked by significant advancements, growing adoption across industries, and increasing debate surrounding its ethical implications. From groundbreaking multimodal models to the rise of open-source AI, we're here to recap the key developments that shaped the landscape for AI in 2024.

1. The Rise of Multimodal AI

This year saw AI break free from the constraints of single modalities like text and images. Multimodal models, capable of processing and generating information across various formats (text, images, audio, video), emerged as a major trend. These models are paving the way for more immersive and interactive AI experiences, with applications ranging from advanced virtual assistants to more realistic and engaging video games.

2. Smaller Language Models and Open Source

While large language models (LLMs) continued to dominate headlines, 2024 witnessed a growing interest in smaller, more efficient models. These models, often open source, offer greater accessibility and customization. This in turn empowers developers and businesses to build tailored AI solutions without the massive computational resources required for LLMs. This democratization of AI is fostering innovation and competition in the field.

3. AI and the GPU Shortage

The increasing demand for AI, particularly for training large models, exacerbated the ongoing global shortage of GPUs. This shortage highlighted the growing need for more efficient AI hardware and sparked innovation in alternative computing architectures.

4. Model Optimization Takes Center Stage

With the rising costs of training and deploying AI models, optimization techniques gained prominence in 2024. Techniques like Low-Rank Adaptation (LoRA) and quantization allowed developers to fine-tune and deploy models more efficiently, reducing computational costs and making AI more accessible.

5. Customized Local Models and Data Pipelines

Businesses increasingly sought to develop customized AI models trained on their own data. This trend led to a surge in the development of robust data pipelines and tools for managing and processing data for AI applications.

6. More Powerful Virtual Agents

AI-powered virtual agents became more sophisticated and capable, thanks to advancements in natural language processing and multimodal AI. These agents are transforming customer service, providing more personalized and efficient support across various channels

7. Ethical Concerns and Regulation

As AI becomes more pervasive, concerns surrounding its ethical implications grew louder in 2024. Issues like bias in AI, data privacy, and the potential for job displacement fueled debates and prompted calls for greater regulation. Governments and organizations worldwide began exploring frameworks for responsible AI development and deployment.

8. The Emergence of “Shadow AI”

The rapid adoption of AI in the workplace led to the rise of “shadow AI,” where employees utilize AI tools without official approval or oversight. This phenomenon raised concerns about data security, compliance, and the need for clear corporate AI policies.

Looking Ahead

2024 laid the groundwork for an even more exciting future for AI. As the technology continues to evolve, we can expect further breakthroughs in areas like multimodal AI, personalized AI experiences, and responsible AI development. The journey that AI took in 2024 is just the beginning. In the coming years, we can expect its promise to be filled with continued innovation and transformation. As you consider how AI can help you and your business, we can help. PKA is continually developing customized solutions that bring the promise and power of AI to your endeavor. January is Stalking Awareness Month. Stalking survivors often speak about a feeling of helplessness, but in New Jersey, help is available from a number of different sources and programs. For this month, and throughout the year, the New Jersey Department of Children and Families urges all citizens to remain vigilant and, when needed, reach out for help.

SEEK EMOTIONAL/PROFESSIONAL SUPPORTS AND TREATMENT.

Stalking can have lasting emotional, physical, and social impacts on victims and their families. Victims often report traumatic stress disorder, anxiety, depression, excessive fear and hypervigilance as well as frustration with systems when seeking help. Overcoming stalking is not easy, but there is help. In NJ, services and supports are available through the DCF Division on Women.
